INTRODUCTION

In Information Sources for Hawaiian Studies, a course offered through the School of Library and Information Studies at the University of Hawaii, as a partial requirement of the course, students were asked to complete a term project. I decided to do a bibliography on a topic which is related to Hawaiian studies for which there is a "market" and that is not well covered in bibliographies. After some thought, I finally decided to prepare a bibliography on native Hawaiian authors.

In anticipation of becoming a secondary school librarian, I believe that this bibliography would facilitate my work in supporting Hawaiiana programs which are an integral part of many secondary public schools. Therefore, the primary audience that I intend to address are Hawaiiana teachers, secondary school librarians, and curriculum specialists. But I can see how the general public, university students, those doing research on Hawaiian interests, and school curriculum specialists would all be able to consult such a bibliography.

Presently, interest in this topic is part of an overall resurgence interest in the Hawaiian culture by native Hawaiians and others. Many have described this resurgence as a renaissance of the Hawaiian culture. If this is the case, then this bibliography can be used to facilitate this strong interest in the Hawaiian culture.

The cause of preserving native Hawaiian culture is an important reason for examining the work of native Hawaiian authors. Due to the small number of native Hawaiians, works by native
Hawaiians on their culture and history would be of critical importance and value. During the search for works of native Hawaiian authors, it was apparent that most works were historical and cultural in nature and a common thread ran throughout their works - To preserve the native Hawaiian culture and history.

Important Sources

The following were significant biographical or bibliographical sources that were used to identify native Hawaiian authors and their works: History Makers of Hawaii: A Biographical Dictionary; Books About Hawaii: Fifty Basic Authors; Builders of Hawaii; and Bibliography of Biographies of Native Hawaiians. All of these sources were located in the Hawaiian and Pacific Collection on the fifth floor of Hamilton Library. More on this valuable collection and how it assisted in producing this bibliography plan in the next section.

Another important source of native Hawaiian authors was collected from various local book catalogs from local presses (Bishop Museum Press, University of Hawaii Press, Bess Press, and Bishop Museum Press).

UH Hamilton: Hawaiian Collection

I found, during my search for biographical and bibliographical resources on native Hawaiian authors, that the Hawaiian and Pacific Collection held all such resources. After searching the UH CARL database, I wanted to know if I had missed any significant biographical and/or bibliographical resources and thus solicited the aid of Dr. Chieko Tachihata, Hawaiian Collection Curator. She suggested a significant resource that would assist me in identifying current native Hawaiian authors - Lisitala: A Bibliography of Pacific Writers. This was of tremendous help in identifying 20th century native Hawaiian authors. Dr. Tachihata also suggested that I examine Hawaiian Language Imprints, 1822-1889, a Bibliography for 19th century native Hawaiian authors. Dr. Tachihata herself was invaluable for assisting the author of this bibliography identify native Hawaiian authors. Her assistance in determining authors who were native Hawaiians was quite essential and made for a significant bibliography. After gathering names of native Hawaiians, I utilized UH CARL for examples of their works.

ORGANIZATION AND SCOPE OF BIBLIOGRAPHY

I have organized the bibliography into two parts: (1) 19th Century Native Hawaiian Authors and (2) 20th Century Native Hawaiian Authors. Under each part, I have arranged the titles alphabetically according to the authors last name. If it is available at the Hamilton Library, a call number is provided at the end of each citation. With some exceptions, I have tried to restrict the sources of this bibliography to monographs. For sources from the 19th century, due to the lack of native Hawaiian authors, I have included sources that are not monographs. Theses, which relate only to native Hawaiian culture or concerns, are also included. This bibliography only includes theses by native Hawaiian authors that were required for graduate degrees (Masters and the Ph.D.). An author index consisting of author names is provided at the end of the bibliography. This bibliography is not exhaustive. Due to time and for practical reasons, I have not listed every monograph per native Hawaiian author. Furthermore, the difficulty in identifying native Hawaiian authors, especially 20th century native Hawaiian authors, will certainly result in native Hawaiian authors not being listed in this bibliography -- for this I apologize to those native Hawaiian authors not included in this bibliography.
