“In our big modern movie palaces there are collected the most gorgeous rugs, furniture and fixtures that money can produce. No kings or emperors have wandered through more luxurious surroundings.”

-- Harold W. Rambusch, decorator of the Roxy Theatre,
“American Theatres of Today,” 1930

“The design of the average modern motion picture theater is elaborate in the extreme; it is a mass of ornament, rich in color, and gorgeous in decoration. It makes the appeal to the masses to whom it caters because in their eyes it is wonderful, beautiful, and luxurious.”

-- R.W. Sexton, editor, “American Theatres of Today,” 1927

[Orpheum Theatre, Los Angeles CA, G. Albert Lansburgh, arch.]

The book is 9 by 12 inches, 368 pages, and features 113 theatres, 275 photographs and 278 drawings.

All sales proceeds support the ongoing efforts of the Theatre Historical Society,
