In this course, students will have the opportunity to self-examine their career interests and aspirations, and if they deem necessary, to redirect their career goals. As technologies advance in application and research, organizations become more flexible in order to accommodate the fluctuations of industry needs. It follows that these practices present major challenges to workers and have profound implications on their career planning and job security. The way in which we meet these challenges will reshape the economic, political, and social policies of the 21st century.
